

Ian Wong is a Principal Radiographer and the modality lead of Interventional Radiology at Sengkang General Hospital, Singapore. He has specialised in the field of interventional radiology for 10 years. As a radiographer trainer and super-user of the interventional radiology team, he was privileged to have experience in a multitude of angiographic equipment, including hybrid-OT and hybrid Angio-CT systems. He had just completed his Master in Medical Imaging with emphasis on interventional radiology at the University College Dublin, Ireland.

He has special interest in lower limb vascular and hepatic oncology intervention; radiation safety and quality assurance; as well as radiographer training in interventional radiology.